The children at the Breath of Life orphanage in Belbari have now fully settled into their new home. Their housemother, Nirmala, not only cares for them with great love but also takes their education and recreation very seriously. Despite the hustle and bustle associated with the move, all the children have advanced to the next grade.

After school, all the children receive English lessons at home. Hopefully, during the upcoming visit from Ton and Jacqueline, they will be able to have simple conversations together.

Birthdays are also celebrated extensively with cake and lots of music.

Pooja, a girl who had to leave the Saraswati orphanage after graduating last year, unfortunately did not pass her entrance exam for the nursing program. She has asked for another chance, and we hope she will succeed this time now that she has found more peace.

With the necessary funds, Pooja can make another attempt to realize her future dream.
